FINKENBINDER AGAIN IN JAIL

D. Rolla Finkenbinder, Alleged Bigamist, Arrested in Western Part of State and Brought back here. Awaits Trial.

D. Rolla Finkenbinder, the alleged bigamist who slipped out after his father-in-law Joseph Thomas, of near Gettysburg, had produced $400 bail, for his appearance for trial at August Court, was captured at Saegertown, Crawford County, by the chief of police on Tuesday and brought to that township on Thursday by County Detective Oliver H. Wilson who went on to Saegertown as soon as the capture was learned. Finkenbinder is now lodged in the Adams County Jail awaiting trial at Novem ber term of Court.

The case will be one of the most interesting which has come up for trial in this county for some time. The man now has two wives, the second of whom was Miss Jennie Thomas, of near Gettysburg, before her marriage on February 28 last in the local Catholic church, by Rev. Fr. Dougherty who knew nothing of the former marriage of the groom.

Some time after the second marriage Mrs Finkenbinder No. 1, who lived in Harrisburg, learned of it and made an investigation. She found the facts true and at once took steps for his arrest. He was arrested here by Chief Sheafer as he stepped from a train. After a hearing before Squire Hill he gave bail for his appearance at Court.

Finkenbinder claims he has defended that he thought the divorce for which he had been suing in Franklin County Court, had been granted and that he was legally separated from his first wife at the time he married Miss Thomas He brought the action on grounds of desertion and says he had been informed by his attorney that the decree would be granted on a date prior to that on which he married Miss Thomas. He took it for granted that this had been done and his second marriage followed.

On July 23 Finkenbinder was referred a divorce from his first wife in Franklin County Court and as a result he now lays claim to two. All the testimony had been taken and the divorce case, it is said, practically concluded when Mrs. Finkenbinder, who had not appeared at any of the hearings, made a request to offer testimony and this held up the granting of the decree which would have made Finkenbinder free to marry again. He claims he knew nothing of the delay until after his second marriage.

The case charging Finkenbinder with bigamy was listed for trial at August term of Court. Joseph Thomas had secured the services of two jail sentences previous by putting up cash bail for his age arrests at Court. The court has failed to show up and it was feared Mr. Thomas, who could ill afford to lose the money, would have to forfeit the bail. An extension of time was secured from the Court by which to produce Finkenbinder and the case was given over into the hands of Detective Wilson.

It proved a difficult task to locate the fugitive but it was finally found that he was in the northwestern part of the state and the services of an officer at Saegertown, a village of about 1500, were secured by telephone. He succeeded in arresting the man and holding him until the arrival of Mr. Wilson.

Finkenbinder was arrested by the Saegertown policeman just as he was about to board a train to go to Corry to meet his second wife whom he had sent money to join him.

According to the "Erianne Republican" of Meadville Fi'kenbinder had been employed for the last two months by the T. A. Gillespie Construction Company as engineer and made a host of friends who learned last night expressed their sympathy. On Tuesday after his arrest, the Meadville paper says, he received all the mail for the Saegertown, paid his bills and told them he was going away. He was very well thought of there and his arrest was a great shock to his many friends.

Mr. Wilson started as soon as possible on his return and reached Gettysburg Thursday with his prisoner.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dinlinger have returned home after spending several weeks in Philadelphia. Atalntic City, and Hughesville.

SIGNED BY CONNIE MACK

Elmer Lawrence, of Mt. Rock, a promising young baseball pitcher for several years, has been signed by Manager Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics and will be given a tryout next spring. He was with the strong Sellersville team during the season just closed, and besides pitching winning ball, is batting almost .400 mark. His many friends in this section will be glad to hear of his advance, and hope that he will "make good."

Mr Lawrence was formerly pitcher of the Hanover team pitching winning ball last season against strong teams. After starting the season there, he went to pitch for the Sellersville team in the Perkiomen League, helping to win the pennant for the Sellersville team.

PURE FOOD VIOLATION

Information has been laid against S. L. Minter for selling eggs containing saccharine instead of sugar, a violation of the pure food laws. The information was laid by J. C. Linton representing the State Dairy and Food Commission. It is alleged that the eggs was the product of the Getz company in York.

MANY WATCH FOOT BALL PROGRESS

Gettysburg Has Heavy Schedule ahead which is giving Coaches, Players and Enthusiasts Much Concern. Nev Players.

Foot ball enthusiasts in town and at college have been watching with considerable interest and no little approbation the development of the squad on Nixon Field during the opening of the season several weeks ago, and the most encouraging feature of the fact that the eleven has a big prospection ahead of it in the coming games of the season.

The Penn game was a disappointment, the Indians having been a surprise and the coming Ursinus match a speculation. Ursinus met Penn on Wednesday and, though defeated by a score of 24 to 0, carried the ball 72 yards in the first period and held Penn scoreless in the first and last quarters, giving one of the best exhibitions seen in Franklin Field this year. The Ursinus team has several stars who will likely prove big factors in the game at Collegeville on Saturday.

Mount St. Mary's, Bucknell, State, Dickinson, Rochester and Muhlenberg are all yet to be played and if Gettysburg is to get away with anything like a creditable showing during the season she must be made quickly Leuth has pushed the team to fighting speed and strength to the backfield. He played against Penn last year and was easily the star of the game. Owing to his track activities he has always hesitated to take part in foot ball but has finally been prevailed upon to help out this season.

McMullen, a new student kept out of the game on account of trouble with his foot, was in practice Wednesday evening and is showing some much encouraging. He is a former Perkiomen star and will be a valuable aid to Leuthold in the game, will doubtless be a first team man.

Coach Philippi, with his large and able corps of assistants, is working hard to bring the big squad into shape and all are well pleased with the progress made up to this time but this does not relieve the situation from the fatures for the security for continued hard work on the part of the players.

AND THE CAT CAME BACK

A cat belonging to Mrs. Wilson, of Chambersburg street, in some manner got into the basement of the Lutheran church several days ago and remained there until Tuesday after noon when its cries were heard and answered. J. W. Garlach procured a long pole with an iron hook attached to pursue on the end. A bit of meat was affixed to the hook and while it was raised while a number of people watched the proceeding with as much enthusiasm as though a human life were being rescued from some lingering situation. The cat, tempted by the meat, jumped for the pole and fell into the fruit receptacle. The pole was lowered and, when it stood ten feet from the ground, the feline made a leap for liberty and way while the crowd applauded.

FARMERS' DAY FOR GETTYSBURG

Project Launched in Gettysburg to Hold One Day Fair Similiar to that Conducted in Waynesboro Last Week.

Following the enormous success of Waynesboro's farmers day on Saturday, when about 6000 people flocked to the Franklin County town, local business men have taken up the plan of holding a similiar one-day fair in Gettysburg. The date has not been definitely fixed but it probably be Saturday, October 26. A meeting is to be held in the near few days in the Court Room when all the details will be arranged.

The plan followed at Waynesboro will likely be adopted here. The various business clubs of the town offer prizes for whatever article they want and the committees then place their exhibits in the Court House ready for the place of business In this way the fair is contested all over the business section of town and the people go from one store to another inspecting the things and buying as they go.

Local merchants have taken to the plan enthusiastically and a preliminary meeting to ascertain the number of prizes could be secured met with immediate success. Everybody is anxious to get in on the affair and to help make it a success and some of the business houses are offering several prizes each. The objects for which the prizes are to be given will be announced the day or two. A number of handsome premiums have already been listed, He had been employed by the day saving the results of farmers' day in his home town.

"I have never had such profitable advertising as I obtained through furnishing the decorations for the fair in my store and I have, as a result of it, secured prospective purchasers of my goods.

"The people from all around came here and bought more than they ever did as they would have done under no other circumstances.

"What was true of my store. I am sure was true of all other merchants who took advantage of the advertisement."

EXCITEMENT AT YORK FAIR

With an estimated attendance of 9,000, which is several thousand in excess of the first day's crowd last year, the fifty-fourth annual exhibit of the York County Agricultural Society opened under most favorable conditions on Tuesday.

The entire program was carried out most successfully and the weather was delightful; all the attractions were in full blast and the Midway was a scene of great activity and apparently everybody was satisfied.

The crowd was livelier than usual for the York fair. A driver dropped dead, a motorcycle rider was seriously hurt, getting bumped on the race track when he landed; a case of hog cholera was discovered in the vicinity of Hanover and was promptly disposed of; a pailful blower and sprayer competition to give up a $40 diamond ring which she is said to have stolen at the Allentown fair, but the show will still go on as usual in vogue on the Midway. Altogether it was something like old times, when to go to the county fair was the event in a year.

For the first time, probably there was no word of dissatisfaction with the fair Tuesday. Everybody agreed that it is the largest fair ever held in York as they also agreed that it is better than any for years.

SOLD TO MINOR

William Thompson, arrested by Chief Sheafer on the charge of selling liquor in a store, was given a hearing before Squire Harnish on Tuesday and released under bail for court.

Thompson is alleged to have been given money by Harry Minnor, aged 21, and Augustus Finnegan, aged 22, for the purpose of buying them whiskey. He is said according to testimony at the hearing, and was later given another quarter for a similar purpose and for which he failed to bring back the whiskey.

GET MUCH GOOD FROM INSPECTION

County Physicians Conducting Physical Examination in the Schools Find Many Minor Defects in the Pupils.

The annual inspection of the public school children of Adams County, which mention was made in these columns some days ago, is now being carried along rapidly under the direction of a corps of county physicians who examine each public school child. The districts covered by the various physicians are as follows:

Gettysburg, Cumberland and Mount Joy townships, Dr. J. R. Dickson; Straban, Hamiltonban, Mt. Pleasant and Conewago townships Dr. George L. Hine; New Oxford, Oxford and Huntington townships, Dr George Sesko; East Berlin, Dr. Elgin; Reading township, Dr. Lau; York Springs, Latimore and Latimore township, Dr. A. B. Caldwell; Biglerville, Arendtsville and Butler township, Dr. William E. Wolff; Hamiltonban, Dr. Trout; Littlestown township, Dr. J. C. Miner; Littlestown and Union township, Dr. Harry Crouse.

Straban, Highland, Freedom, Menallen, Berwick, Tyrone and Germany township school houses are finished that they did not want the inspection No fourth class school district need take the service, when it is paid for by the state, unless they want it but the authorities are always glad to have the directors take definite action against them.

The physicians in charge of the work in the county report very little illness and few are found to be defective in the children. The troubles are principally with the eyes and bone imperfections. Many will frequently require nutter and present future treatment while others will be found It is frequently discovered to be the result of removable wax and other troubles which have been impending defectives may soon secure relief.

All the returns are made to the state and the parents then notified of the defects found in their children.

COUNCIL TO MAKE BIG BOND ISSUE

Fifteen Thousand Dollar Bond Issues Provided in Ordinance which Gets First Passage. Hitching Post Question Settled.

An ordinance providing for a bond issue of $15,000 was given preliminary passage in the town council on Tuesday evening and, after the necessary advertisement, will come up for final approval and the signature of the burgess. The purpose of the bond issue is to fund the floating indebtedness at about $10,000 and to provide a fund of $5,000 for permanent improvements to the town streets.

Borough Solicitor Wible reported to council that it had the power to issue bonds to the amount of $18,000 without a vote, putting it to the voters of the people. There are at present outstanding $11,000.00 in bonds unauthorized by popular vote.

The proposed issue will be in thirty bonds of $500 each, to bear interest at four per cent, payable semi-annually. One bond will mature each year, beginning with October 1, 1913. These interest will be payable April 1 and October 1 of each year.

It is the interest on the bonds, and for the redemption of them as they come due, a special tax of $1000 will be levied for 1913: of $1100 for 1914; $1200 for 1915 and so on, distributing by $100 each year until the entire issue is redressed.

It was pointed out very clearly by members of council that the portion to be used for the improvement of town streets is to be for their permanent improvement and not for temporary repairing. By issuing bonds to fund the floating indebtedness the borough saves one per cent annually on the same to be expended in funding debt were to be carried along as the present floating debt is carried.

HITCHING POST MATTER

The hitching post question was finally decided in favor of retaining the meeting when council agreed to allow four posts instead of six at the Square and that one be placed at the G. W. Spangler and Dougherty and Hartzy corners. The posts at either end of the line at the Weaver store are to be removed. Permission is granted in all these cases to have the posts removed deere the posts and also provided the fence is removed in order to keep the roadway clean about the posts.

The use of the engine house parlor by the state meeting of the Mothers' Congress was granted, on condition of the engine house roof was referred to the property committee.

The matter of amount members present to pass the Water street extension was referred to the next meeting and will be held over until the next meeting.

INCREASE WAGES

Owing to the great demand for laborers and the high prices being paid by the railroad companies, a committee reported that Street Commissioner Newman was having trouble getting hands. Many have left the early two regular men and these threaten to leave because they can get more money elsewhere. Council decided to increase the pay of laborers from 15 to 16 2-3 cents per hour. A motion was to go into effect now and to remain in effect until the first meeting in December.

In the matter of the extension of the sewer from the Public School building the Solicitor was instructed to proceed so that benefits as well as damages may be assessed. Petitions from Mrs. Mary G. Gilbert for a free plug on West Middle street and permission to open the street were referred to the property committee to locate said plug.

Permission was granted W. Lavere Hafer to make pavement on Carlisle street from the house to the line of trees standing on or near the building line.

There was further talk of violations of the sewer ordinance by those who allow their receptacle to empty into the mains. It was agreed that prosecution seemed to be the best way to abate the practice.

The following members of council were present: Messrs. Trostle, Butt, Bhaler, Arner, Keith and Cobel.

Council adjourned to Tuesday, November 5.

PEAR BLOSSOMS

Henry Bushler, of Stewart street, brought to this office a part of a branch from his pear tree which is bearing fruit and blossoms at the same time.

THE REAL LILLIAN RUSSEL HERE

Former Actress and Husband, A. P. Moore, Millionaire Pittsburgh Newspaper Man in Town. Is Writing Play about Gettysburg.

Mrs. Lillian Russel Moore said this morning at the Hotel Gettysburg that, after riding over the turnpike from York, she never drew half of the prunels from a play she is writing about Gettysburg, to the repair of the York road.

It will be recalled that the famous actress, Miss Russel, after a number of former matrimonial adventures, was married to Alexander P. Moore, Pittsburgh newspaper publisher, in July. Mr and Mrs. Moore accompanied by a chauffeur and maid arrived at the Hotel Gettysburg Monday evening. They motored from Philadelphia where Mrs. Moore had met Mayor Smith, at Lubin moving picture fame. Mrs. Moore said that Lubin officials are in contract for a series of motion picture films, but she did not think her motion picture work would permit her making any other engagements. Mrs Moore has lost none of the charm that made her popular with thousands of admirers, in theatre parties. She also retains the art of getting newspaper headlines. She declared that although a farewell tour would have many alluremants her home life and her new stage work kept all thoughts of the footlight life in the background. In addition to the drama about Gettysburg for which she came here to gather local color, she is writing newspaper articles that are syndicated and used by some seventy papers.

The announcement that Mrs. Moore would use part of the proceeds from her new play to repair the York Pike, and would "fix the stones" of the condition of that road, thoroughfare of any "monument state," from the Times representative explained to Mrs. Moore that the road was incorporated by the state Highway Department for reconstruction under the Sproul road bill, and that work on a portion of it had already been completed she said, "at any rate I am willing to do anything I can to relieve the actual suffering other automobilists must endure who name this way. I have traveled all over the United States and many parts of Europe and never encountered worse roads than this one." The people of the community will naturally be carried away by this generous offer. Many have offered help but few promised. If the money manages to struggle through the repairs without individual assistance a benefit performance of the proposed play will be given at the Wizard for other roads in the vicinity. The generosity of the star in this case is partly due to the repairs in progress. Drains are being laid and bridges built over several low places. At these points fresh earth and stones piled up by repairs obstruct passage and several points it is necessary to make detours. This state of affairs is, of course, temporary, and will be done away with when the drains and bridges are in place.

Alexander P. Moore is publisher of the Pittsburgh Leader, and has other extensive newspaper interests. He was one of the delegates to the Republican convention at Chicago and is a figure of national prominence in the Progressive party. In speaking of the political situation, Mr. Moore said, "Roosevelt will carry Pennsylvania by 200,000. Even though he should be defeated for the presidency, the cause for which he is fighting is won. The people have become imbued with the spirit of progressiveness; that is the big fight. Roosevelt is one of the greatest men this country ever had, and the progressive spirit which he instigated will die with his defeat. It will continue and change the old condition for the better." At this point Mr. Moore lighted a reporter a cigar. Under strict interpretation of the new anti-smoking law this story should probably be labeled "advertising."

Mr. and Mrs. Moore spent part of the day on the battlefield. Fourteen graduate nurses for the privilege of delineating the memorial struggle. This is the first visit of either of them to Gettysburg and they are enthusiastic over the many points of interest. Mrs. Moore remarked that the manuscript ready for production during the season of 1913-14. It will doubtless be availed with ill-concealed impatience by those who may have furnished the local color as well as the theatre going public.

HELD FOR COURT

At a hearing before Justice Hill, held Monday afternoon, Charles Yeager, of Cumberland township, was held under bail for court on the charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons. Yeager, who works on the farm of Joseph B. Twining, was arrested Saturday evening at the festival of Fairyday Hollow. He was said to have been under the influence of liquor and flourishing a loaded revolver in a dangerous manner.

PARCELS POST IN EFFECT JAN. 1ST.

New Law Will Bring about Changes in Gettysburg Mail Service. Will mean Great Benefit to Country People.

Gettysburg post office will receive within the next several weeks instructions from the postmaster general as to the establishment of rural routes for the new parcels post law, which according to an order issued by the postal congress goes into effect in Gettysburg and elsewhere throughout the United States, January 1, 1913.

The new law will bring about changes in the mail service in Adams county, in every main road corner of the country, the most remote rural habitation being affected. It was not intended by the lawmakers that the change should be for the improvement of the service and it will give the householder, the merchant and the farmer more opportunities such as they never enjoyed before.

While the law in its completeness can hardly be put into effect at the time designated, as the many innovations must be introduced gradually, it is certain it will mean that the business of every postoffice and every rural mail route in the country will be doubled and perhaps trebled. It will mean in Gettysburg the sending from one to five thousand in the mail of time

At present the limit on packages is four pounds, whereas under the new conditions the limit will be 11 pounds. However, the postmaster general is prohibitive for many of the articles that enter into the cost of living.

Whereas the new postage rates will permit produce to be shipped to city dwellers from the country and the shipment of merchandise to the farm dweller. Under the new arrangement the store in Gettysburg will undoubtedly develop a mail order department selling merchandise to every part of the county.

The present rates for merchandise by mail is 16 cents an ounce. The charges being 61 cents for a four pound package. The new rate will make a four pound package can be sent anywhere within a 50 mile zone for 16 cents, the limit, can be sent within a 50 mile for 35 cents. However, when the package goes beyond this zone the charges amount to more than 35 cents it will be just as cheap to send the article by express, between points where there are express offices.

Under the parcels post a much better dressed poultry during certain seasons and practically all produce can be sent by mail. It is generally known that on the prices of meats poultry and the like are high in a great difference between the prices on the farm and in the city.

HANOVER OPERA HOUSE SOLD

The Hanover Opera House, which was built by the late David F. Eichelberger and Town Hall company, has been sold at public sale by the executors of the estate. David F. Frey was the purchaser, at $8,800—the property having been bid in at a mortgage of $20,0,00. Mr. Frey is acting trustee for twenty business men of the town, who subscribed $500 each to the purchase of the property. The Hanover Market and Town Hall company was organized in 1886. with a paid-up capital of $9?0.00. The company erected a building having a market on the first floor and a theatre on the second floor. The market was intended for the purchase of produce, but proved a failure from the outset and finally was closed. The theatre was also a failure, was remodeled, at an expense of about $5,000, and opened as a theatre without and a modern theatre, with a seating capacity of 1200, erected on the first floor. The building was enlarged by an addition to the rear, for the dressing rooms, a moving picture stage was provided, and all the latest appliances provided for large musical productions and plays. The theatre is now fully up to date, and would be a success on a much larger town than Hanover.

HORSES STOLEN

On Saturday evening a horse and buggy belonging to Mark Bream of near York Springs, was taken from where it had been tied, in front of C. W. Gardner's store. Upon discovering the loss of the team, Mr. Bream notified County Detective Wilson and action for a recovery was begun. Saturday morning the horse returned to Mr. Bream's stable without the wagon or harness. The animal and evidently escaped from the thief when it was unhitched. No word of the harness or buggy has been received. The horses was valued at $200 and the wagon $100. The buggy has an automobile seat painted black, with a red running gear.

Two other teams reported stolen Saturday evening were a black horse and buggy taken from Hanover and a brown mule and with a buggy stolen at Hagerstown. Word of any of the stolen outfits should be sent Charles to H. Wilson, at Gettysburg.

W. M. STILL AT IT

The Western Maryland lived up to its reputation Saturday by derailing a car at Rocks Summit and delaying all other trains. As usual, today, all their through trains were late. One continuous performance is heard from those who have to travel on this poorly managed road.

LARGE VEGETABLES

P. S. Peters, of Bendersville has a red beet on exhibition in S. H. Gochnauer's store that weighs 12 pounds, 12 ounces.

BRIEF ITEMS FROM ADJOINING TOWNS

Post Office Department Committee Confers with Maryland People — Littlestown again has Lecture Course. Other Items.

A special committee working out plans for the new parcels post system which goes into effect January 1st, 1913, has been visiting Westminster, Hagerstown and Frederick this week. They confer with the postmaster, merchants and farmers in each town. The above named places were selected because of their proximity to Washington and the surrounding territory. Carroll and Frederick counties represented the rural communities that would make use of the new post office privilege.

Arrangements have been completed for the Littlestown lecture course. There will be five entertainments during the winter. The first number is October 31st and the last one March 14th.

The question of lowering the Chambersburg ash and bark drivers is being agitated. It is understood that the drivers could be induced to give better service if they operated under authority of the municipality.

The Philadelphia Ledger says, "Lincoln up for only six months of Gettysburg. The record is also one and unfinally can utilize it."

In addition to his hard luck experienced by having run most of the week during their late, the stables of the Cumberland county Agricultural Association at Carlisle were destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The loss is about three thousand dollars. It is supposed the blaze was started by boys who built a bonfire near by.

THE WESTERN MARYLAND'S DAILY WRECK

A day gone by without some wreck on the Western Maryland railroad is now an exception. Friday's contribution was seven cars of coal which were pulled between Iron Springs and Rocks, near Mayne Furnace the coke by combining the conductor and one linkman as he crossed a distance of 50 feet from the track. The man was not injured with the exception of severe bruises Section hands from New Oxford, Gettysburg and Littlestown are assisting Hagerstown wrecking crew in clearing the track and it is thought one hundred new ties will be needed to put the track in shape for further travel. Until the track is cleared all passengers will be transfered at the point of the wreck.

MEETING WITH SUCCESS

L. K. Arendt, a former Adams County man who has been employed in Harrisburg for some time past has gone to Lebanon where he will assume the duties of head miller in a flour mill of over 300 barrels daily capacity.

SUPERIORITY BEHIND BAT NECESSARY

Jimmy Archer, Chicago Cub Catcher.

High-class catchers seem to be almost indispensible to championship ball clubs. True, there have been a few pennant winners, notably Detroit, who could not boast backstops whose work bordered on greatness, but a vast majority of them were very strong behind the bat.

This was true of the old Detroit champions of 1887 with Charley Bennett behind the bat. Buckie Jennings managed to struggle along without a really high-class backstop until the season, and to cop a few pennants despite this handicap, but the most surprising and phenomenal development of Oscar Stanage has served to strengthen the Tigers in that department this season.

Had not Jennings cast aside Archer, it would not have been necessary for Detroit to seek the building of Stanage into a star. Archer was a dis-

mond in the rough, but Jennings failed to discover the fact, and when he turned adrift the Cubs proceeded to manicure behind the bat he was guilty of one of the extremely few errors in judgment that are to be found in his managerial career.

Take the first five teams in the National League, and it will be observed that all of them are strong behind the bat; or were until Doolin of the Phillies was crippled. New York probably is the weakest in this respect, although Meyers shows wonderful improvement and has been doing good work. Chicago has Archer and Pittsburg has the durable Gibson, who strong race being made by St. Louis and Philadelphia is attributed to the work of Bresnahan and Doolin in a marked degree.

And here we have examples of the vast difference between really great catchers and the mere theatrical workers. It takes more than a good throwing arm to make a man valuable behind the bat.

Much of Alexander's success with the Phillies undoubtedly has been due to the influence of Doolin behind the bat, while it was Bresnahan's tactics inculcated in the St. Louis pitcher that developed the effectiveness of the Cardinal mound men. Fix three pitchers now St. Louis has been a good run-getting organization, but it was not until this season that the pitchers were able to give the club anything like an adequate defense.

Going back to the early days of the game, the old Boston bunch, winners of four consecutive pennants, had McVey behind the bat when it won its first flag, while Ben Dixon, one of the original "big four" was Boston's mainstay behind the bat at the three following seasons. Then White was with Chicago in 1877, when that club won the National League pennant, and when he returned to Boston in 1887, the Beaneaters added a fifth flag to their collection. That season, however, White declined to catch Bond, and Snyder was added to the staff.

Chicago had the great "Silver" Flint behind the bat when it won three pennants in a row in 1880, 1881 and 1882, and again in 1885 and 1886, when it won two more trophies.

Another No-Hit Game.

Howlik, the former Sox pitcher, now with Milwaukee, pitched the second no-hit game of the American season this season when he shut out Louisville in the first game of a double header without a hit or a run. The big fellow was a wonderful form, and there was not the semblance of a hit made off of him throughout the game. He walked three men and fanned six. Only one man reached second base.

Gives Griffith Credit.

Jean Dubuc, though Clark Griffith could not see him and let him go from Cincinnati, is found enough to believe that he learned most of what he knows about baseball from the Old Fox. He says Griff taught him a change of pace and that is his greatest asset as a pitcher.

A WORTHY EXAMPLE.

When Louis Mann first met his former neighbor, Shag Rosenau, upstairs, Shag was very much interested in the Temples.

"So yer a actor, eh?" he asked, "indeed, its true," replied Mr Mann. "Good one?"

"Ahem!" came from Mr. Mann. "Some people say I am."

"Well, you gotta go some to beat a actor I seen in a show one time," said Shag.

"So? Who was he?"

"I've forgot his name," said Shag, switching his chew to the other cheek, "but I seen him with my own eyes turn a heck somersault on top of a horse that was runnin'."

"Exclamatory" Was Right.

Mrs. Mann's colored washerwoman, Martha, was complaining of her husband's health.

"Why, he be sick, Martha?" asked Mrs. Mason.

"He's very po'ly, ma'am, very po'ly," answered the woman. "He's got the exclamatory rheumatiz."

"You mean inflammatory, Martha," said the patron. "Exclamatory means to cry out."

"Yes, ma'am," replied Martha, with considerable spirit, "I is. He bellers all the time."—Judge.

OF COURSE NOT.

Old Gentleman (to kid who's smoking)—When I was your age I didn't smoke in the way you do.

The Kid—Well, I guess you didn't. I'm the champeen imitator of the ward.

Proud Persons.

Some men there are
Who'd rather die
Than set a pace
Or humble pie.

Forestalled.

Dr. Sangrado, who is generally a slave to the patient, ordered that he be bled immediately.

"But," gasped the hapless wretch, "I have just bought two reserved seat tickets for a Cub-Giants ball game from a scalper!"

"In that case," said the doctor, hesitating for the first time in his career, "omit the bleeding. Fill his stomach with warm water. Yes dunata, dunata."

Missing the Chance.

Hotel Manager—Oh, yes, after a big night in the dining room we have quite a lot of silver!

Reporter (slyly)—But very little of the paper money gets away, eh?—Judge.

Encouragement.

Mollie—And so you proposed immediately after he kissed you?

Chelle—Yes.

"And did she give you any encouragement?"

"Oh, yes."

"Communications in order?"

"No, she refused me."

"But I thought you said she gave you encouragement?"

"She did. She looked at me twice before she refused me."

Something Added to a Letter.

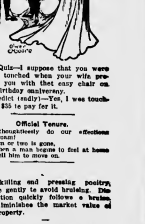
Teacher—Tommie, what is a postscript?

Tommie—Don't know ma'am.

"Why, yes you do. After I write a letter I add something to it. That's a postscript."

"Oh, is it ma'am? I thought that called 'em postage stamps!"

FACTS IN THE CASE.



Do Quite—I suppose that you were deeply touched when your wife proposited you with that many cans, on your birthday anniversary.

Benedict (ruefully)—Yes, I was touched for $35 to pay for it.

Official Tenure.

How thoughtlessly do our «flections roun!

A term or two is gone,
Before we've time to feel at home
We tell him to move on.

In killing and pressing poultry, handle gently to avoid bruising. Dressed poultry quickly follows the head and diminishes the market value of the property.

It requires three months or more to grow a broiler, nine months before the chicken is ready for the table. Broilers shrink about half a pound each when dressed.

It does not pay to doctor a fowl that is hopelessly ill or crippled or has a contagious disease. The latter are never permanently cured, and will transmit their weakness to their offspring.

No Place for Him.

"Are you going to her wedding?" the jilted woman's friend asked.

"No. I haven't the least desire to feel like August Belmont at a Democratic convention."

Here's a Bold Man.

She—Impudent, sir! How dare you!

He—I suppose that's why you never permit it to exist where you are.

Coming as the guests of the town of Brockton, Massachusetts, a party of one hundred and thirty eight, veterans and their friends, arrived in Gettysburg on Thursday evening to remain here until Sunday. The veterans are all members of Fletcher Webster Post 108, G. A. R., and are wearing the blue with conspicuous pride.

The party left Brockton on last Wednesday and went to New York for a day's sight seeing, arriving in Gettysburg in time for supper on Thursday and are all quartered in the Eagle Hotel. Frt. morning a group picture was taken on the steps of College Church and the days here will be used in various tours of the battlefield.

After breakfast on Sunday morning they leave in their special train for Harper's Ferry and from there go to Washington. On their return here they will stop in Philadelphia and get back to their home town on Wednesday

The party of such a large party of veterans is most unusual. All the necessary expenses are provided by the citizens of Brockton and the outing is entirely complimentary to the Grand War "boys in blue." All of them are wearing Army badges and a number are also wearing little leather shoes, advertising one of the chief industries of the city which they represent.

DANGER IN CARTRIDGES

Dr Joseph Kalbfus, state game commissioner, while in Waynesboro last week made a statement to the citizens to the danger involved in the use of high power cartridges. Some of the cartridges were used in that vicinity during last deer season. The projectile is large and will travel such force that it wil kill a man at a distance of five miles.

The cartridges have can't tell where they will land, or what they will hit. Wounded and dead deer were found in the mountains last year, akin by these projectiles without the knowledge of the men who fired the shot.

The use of this ammunition makes it dangerous for other hunters to be in the mountains where these projectiles are a menace to the lives of innocent persons. It will pay to heed Dr. Jas desires that the people shall demand the prohibition of their use.

GIANTS DEFEAT BOSTON, 2 TO 1

Red Sox Fail to Score Until Ninth Inning.

MADE DESPERATE RALLY

STANDING OF THE CLUBS.

	Won.	Lost.	P. C
Boston	1	0	500
New York	1	1	500

Boston, Oct. 11.—Again the Giants and Red Sox had it out tooth and nail for the purest wrench of base ball, and this time the Giants won The score was 2 to 1, and then they won by a hair's breadth, for Fletcher's homer was pushed on the last ball hit.

Marquard, pitcher, in complexion from the first two games was this combination The Reds settled down to base ball which was of smoother texture and more natural in its pace. Yet the game lacked nothing, although it was in keeping with its fellows in being "nip and tuck" to the full with uncertainty. The Giants ran up a score of two and turned the Red Sox back' baffled and scoreless for eight consecutive innings. In the last two innings however, the Red Sox attack quickened a bit, and their aggressiveness resulted in preventing a whitewash.

A stuff by Merkle was the only flaw in the New York fielding. It came in the ninth inning after the Red Sox had made their second run. Hooper out, but it did create a spell of excitement in the stands until Doyle, with a superb running catch on a line drive so hard that it was almost invisible, brought the game to an end, with two base runners on and Merkle's spill for the home plate. This etched in a new light the versatility and in dire straits toward the last, but all had the master of the Red Sox.

It wasn't all his fault that he was in trouble in the ninth, although he appeared to be losing his grip. The error by Merkle made it difficult for him, but he was plucky even then and for the greater part of the game cool and deliberate. The one play that will be has made Marquard famous and forever secure as show and greatly perplexed the Red Sox. In the closing innings the Sox had begun to be a storm of yelling by the home rooters, but the remained impervious, pitching to the dio only in the ninth, when he and the runs were saved by Devore's comely catch.

The Giants, too, fared pitching that was down to them. They were strangers to O'Brien, just as the Red Sox knew nought of Marquard save by reputation sed observation. The New Yorkers didn't make any great inducement in O'Brien's pitching, but they did take more readily to his spitball than the enemy did to Marquard's effortless. The fielding was marvelous, barring Merkle's fall from grace, stainless and snappy, and with a blend of the sensational Gardner and Lewis made most of the trouble for the New Yorkers with the stick, whereas Murray and Hoeing, who have rendered valuable service in every game, were main New York's mainstay with the bat.

The score:

LOCAL CREEKS MAY GO TO WAR

Trouble in the Balkans likely to mean Summons for Gettysburg's Greek Citizens. All express willingness to go to War.

Announcement is made by the Greek Consul at New York that Greeks in this country who are called in the present crisis of home will be called upon in return to throw if the trouble in the Balkans results in war.

There are three Greeks in Gettysburg two of whom may be effected in this announcement. Gust Varelas, who conducts a confectionery store next door to the Eagle Hotel and John Pettis, of Irvin Bortheus Soda water parlor. Louis Pettis, the other member of the firm says he is only nineteen years old and that the order will not include him. George Pettis, who was formerly employed in businesses here, and now residing in Hanover where he conducts the pool room, is among the half dozen who may be drafted from that place.

Gust Varelas when interviewed this morning said, "Generally speaking the Greeks in America are disposed to aid their home country generously but an unsigned sent forth during the trouble with Turkey some years ago resulted in many of us giving up our occupations in which we had become established here to go back to Greece to find that we were not needed. Unless hostilities are actually begun and notice is received from our consul the emigration will not be as large as it was at that time." Varelas has also made application for naturalization but his papers are not been returned from the commissioner.

The order will entail hardship in some cases even though the younger business will be liable to leave, but the penalty attached to a disregard of the summons, in the event of their remaining to Greece, will prevent them in leaving the country where they have a chance to return and take up their occupations.

Several hundred Greeks have already sailed from Philadelphia for Greece. The local Greeks will likely make no sense to obey the summons when received from their consul.

WHAT TO USE FOR SPRAYING

Notwithstanding the educational campaign that has been conducted in the various agencies throughout Pennsylvania, by State Zoologist Surface from his office at Harrisburg, a few persons yet write and ask what material they shall use in spraying at the time of blasting for what pests they wish to spray, what kinds of trees or plants are to be sprayed, and at what time of year they wish to do the work. As a consequence Professor Surface is obliged to reply that the kind of material to use in spraying must depend upon the kind of pest for which the application is to be made, the kind of plant upon which it is to be used and the time of the year when the work is to be done.

In general, the recommendation is to spray when the trees are dormant for San Jose scale and other scale insects, using the bolled lime-sulphur solution For plant diseases he recommends either scale dilute lime-sulfur solution or bordeaux mixture, made by using three pounds of blue stone and four pounds of quick lime to fifty gallons of water. You use no one material in all kinds of trees or all kinds of spraying. The bordeaux mixture is only a fungicide It is not used for insects. It is the best fungicide in preventing the diseases of leaf and fruit of the apple, but for most other plant diseases we are now using a dilute lime sulphur solution in its place.

If you are of receiving our bulletins discussing this subjects in greater length, you gabould have them. They are free of charge.

ARMY ENLISTMENTS INCREASE.

Army enlistments during the last few months have taken a sudden and surprising increase according to War Department figures just given out. Despite the fact that the summer months are usually the most unfavorable periods, 6,275 men enlisted in the regular service during July, August and September. One reason which might be given for this large increase in recruiting is the new requirement for a high school education over the old requirement for a grammar school education. This law provides that every man enlisting after that date must complete his three years' service and then must hold himself in readiness as a reserve for the next four years. He may be summoned at any time to serve in the event of war or the imminence of war. The enlistment may man who have been considering serving in the army, should do it at the same time, do not wish to be held under obligation for so long a period, have taken advantage of the opportunity to enter before the law goes into effect, thus avoiding the three years' reserve duty.

COLLEGE DEFEATS LEBANON VALLEY

Gettysburg Boys Win by Score of 6 to 0. Home Team Shows Improvement Next Game here November 9th.

Gettysburg College foot ball team defeated Lebanon Valley College by the score of 6 to 0, Saturday afternoon on the gridiron which is to be known as Nitz's Field. The home team put up a much better exhibition of foot ball against this up-state team than they showed in last Saturday's game with the University of Pennsylvania. Although the day was warm for snappy playing the team seemed to have more life and ginger then during the former game. There is still much room for improvement which will likely come as the season advances.

The game was held finnell from start to finish. The ball was in Gettysburg territory most of the time, although the visitors were able to advance it to the 30 yard line on several occasions, only to be forced back by the fierce defensive work of the locals.

The only touch down was scored in the first quarter and goes to Captain Metzger. Lebanon Valley failed to kick goal after touch down. The game with Muhlenberg College on Saturday, October 19th will be played on October 19th.

Although the membership has dropped from several hundred, the number that journeyed here years ago to a few more than they have had some of their old time fame. They stopped at the Hotel Gettysburg and shortly after their arrival left for their customary display of fireworks. The display this year consisted of a mine containing 5200 fire crackers, literally fact in length. The mouse also touched off an exposed 5 inch shell of infantry encampment. Residents of town may have been in ignorance of exactly what did not but its purpose. Mr. Smith who was a member of the 20th Pennsylvania regiment at the Battle of Gettysburg with other veterans was one of the guests. $45 CLEARED BY HIGH SCHOOL

Entertainment by Clover Leaf and Palm Societies Successful. Meritorious Performance throughout. Money for Manual Training.

An appreciative audience witnessed the performance of the Clover Leaf and Palm Literary societies given in the High School building Friday evening.

The entertainment consisted of recitations, readings, musical selections, musical duets and a presentation of "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Work of the participants showed a quality and finish unusual in high school productions. Especially did the readings and recitations excite the admiration of the audience. Considerable credit is due the officers and recitations corps of teachers in their apartment. Readings of the society papers by Miss Maybelle Little for the Palms and Miss Esther Crouse for the Clover Leaf showed the ability of the society members. The musical numbers were well received, the spinning song of the quartet was encored to please.

A remarkable feature of the perfor mance was its production with no accompaniment. The entire proceeds, which amounted to about $45.00, will be devoted to the manual training fund. The sum is a little more than was expected, as it did not include the proceeds of the small refreshment stand conducted by the societies.

HEAD DRESS A SYMBOL

Significant to Friends and Enemies Was the Feathered Headgear So Proudly Worn by the Honored "Braves" of the Prairies.

Few ornaments worn by the Indians are purely decorative, as was are accustomed to believe. Almost every fantastic part of the Chieves' dress says the Boston Herald, was symbolic, and the art of reading the story on the locker and esteemed by the grand possessor. The feathered headgear known as the "war bonnet," for instance, was used for the social relation, the interdependence and was not to be confused with the supernatural, as were so many of the Indian's symbols.

The feathers of which the materials required to make the bonnet were gathered by the man who wished to possess it, but its manufacture depended on the achievement of the wearer. A sort of skull cap was made of dressed buckskin, with a long tail behind, a border of bulded skin about the edge formed the foundation for the crown of which the tip of the tail was fastened so as to stand upright about the crown. Such one of these feathers stood for a man; the tip of which had fallen off, and the hole in the skeleton of the recital the leather was also fastened to the tail, indicating that during the war bonnet, who then put a feather in the hole. Sometimes as many of these bonnets contained 55 or more feathers, and as each feather represents have an honor earned upon the war bonnet.

When a warrior counted his honors, he had only to examine his bonnet to represent them, saying: "In such a battle I did this, and in the next." Upon the recital the feather was taken from the bonnet and given to the person during the war bonnet, who then put a feather in the hole. Sometimes as many of these bonnets contained 55 or more feathers, and as each feather represents have an honor earned upon the war bonnet. This obtained was generally some feature of the battle in which he had been. Hereby he received supernatural aid in the time of need. Sometimes the flap was embroidered with porcupine quills or painted with symbolic designs. Songs were sung during the making of the bonnet.

Before the advent of the horse among the Indians tribes the flop of the bonnet fell over the back of the wearer, thus avoiding interference while walking or running or other ornaments; but after the horses became plentiful the flap was extended to a man's feet when standing; when his man was mounted it fell over the back of his horse. In former times a man could not display signs of valor abut with a fringe of hair except by consent of the chief, but this seems to be counted on the strands of hair on the feathers used in making the war bonnet. Sometimes the whole tuft of the fringe stood for a war honor, being placed there by the counting twice. It was this custom that made garments of deer hair so highly prized and valued. The hair for the fringe was generally procured from the scalps of man's male relatives. Each of the locks represented a fallen enemy, and in the handling of skin, frequently arranged in this cult work. The reason for the parade of these locks on ceremonious occasions is obvious, though the Sioux has so rigorously forbidden war.

Passing of the Parlor.

Another fact of the times is the passing of the parlor and the making of the living room. Time was when the parlor was like a new suit of clothes, still to be used on state occasions. It was usually furnished with uncomfortable, stiff furniture, and was kept closed during the week and used on Sunday.

The living room, however, and people are furnishing rooms, instead of parlors. Instead of the plain and big, comfortable chairs that are ready for business all the time. Instead of the big bureau have the dressing room, but in the average house, the living room has taken the place of the parlor. It is only another sign that people are realizing the necessity of having a house furnished in real, homelike fashion.

Great Idea.

John, aged 7, was very fond of running with his younger brother through the fields. Upon them their mother remonstrated in vain because their clothes suffered on the play of making the boys clean them, John one day said: Mother Archie the next. "She seemed a great joke until John had actually pulled off the task through the best part of an hour. He then came, patting a shine on the four little shoes; then he went to his mother with serious face and said:

"Mother, I've got the idea. I won't ever run through the ashes any more —except on Arbor day to clean!"

Uncle Pennywise Says.

I hate a man who goes around studies, who and of study and brag ging that he didn't take a vacation.

HOUSEKEEPER'S VACATION AND WHAT FOLLOWED

When the hot spell in July came John insisted that I go to the shore for two weeks. I demurred, and because I didn't want to go—I was so tired of my own table that I would have gone anywhere rather than to didn't like to leave John to Mellora's tender mercies, knowing Mallory as I did.

"I don't see how you could get along, John."

"Oh, Mallory will look after me," said John easily.

"No, she won't," I protested. "If she would, going away would be simple—I know that Mallory needed a vacation to make her look like anything else. "If I take a vacation, Mallory will take one, too, for I shall not get meals and make up your bed and wash it. It never will."

"I will," insisted John, stoutly. "If Mallory goes off. You run the store and house, and forget Mallory for two weeks. She's getting on your nerves."

John persuaded me into thinking that it was my duty to go. It was the first time I ever considered myself out by the heat. When I went to the station I felt as if I were back in the relative merits of potatoes and beans, peas and squash. I, however, poked my finger at a vegetable, and I felt as if I were going.

Before I left I had a heart-to-heart talk with Mallory, in which I was going away and I wanted her to take good care of Mr. Green in my absence. She looked at me as if I were one more pipe, then his coffee cooled and his bread got stale. I knew that properly browned, that his nuttrees were to be served by day, and also to various other minute directions. Mallory was a mere automaton of life in connection with her husband's comfort. Mallory listened respectfully and gave me glib assurances that she would look after Mr. Green, "mum" as she had looked after me, "yes'm" me. I pretended to believe her and we parted amicably, though I was smarting.

John put me on the train one stifling afternoon. If my ticket hadn't been paid for, I should have turned back, I felt so guilty leaving John in the hands of Mallory and irresponsible morons to look after him.

The shore was delightfully cool and I had a fine time for a week.

For nine days I enjoyed the luxury of doing as I pleased, eating what I had, on the tenth day, panicky, I began to feel that there was something wrong, though they were pointedly cheerful. Without letting him into the secret, I packed my trunk and came home.

I let myself into a deserted apartment. The rooms had a peculiar, "shut up" smell. The kitchen of my dressing table, I saw that the dust on it was thick enough to hide the color of the furniture. John's bed had been spread carelessly, and there were two very soiled and wrinkled sheets. Mallory was evidently saving herself washing from the condition of the apartment she left, been anywhere around since I left.

I found myself without a maid, and in a dreadful temper. The dust in the kitchen was full of dirty dishes. I was thoroughly angry. I began to bring his own breakfast and using clean sheets as long as there were any left. Congratulating myself upon the economy and comfort of my return visit and feeling had equipped me with, I called Mallory to account. However, she scrubbed and dusted and swept the apartment into a semblance of cleanliness. Asked of me, however, still stretched several days of hard house cleaning and the task of breaking in a new maid.

When John came home at nine o'clock that night I was in bed, so worked I could scarcely utter a feeble welcome.

"Been a good time, honey?"

"Lovely," I murmured.

"You see, it pays to take a vacation."

I wandered.

Banking as a Grocer's Adjunct.

A grocer in Kansas recently established a branch store, spent a day in the office of the main store, and proceeded to buy out, investigating neighborhood conditions. He found a little girl for two pounds of sugar, a packet of starch, another girl for salt, and so forth. Then he purchased some 20 cents. "I never will have a dollar tomorrow," she said. "And she will pay you then."

The grocer nodded.

"And she wants the change now," the child added. The banker proceeded to buy thread."

Unbelievable but true at 13 cents.

The visitor was amazed.

"Is that the way you do business down here?" he asked.

"Have to," said the neighborhood tradesman. "Can't get along any other way. You have to humor the people you can safely extend credit to, but you must keep an eye on the cash and a limited banking business without interest is the basis of my success. My success in the part of town."

The grocer abandoned the new enterprise.

Character Told by Clothes.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, says in a newspaper article: "What I get on order for a statue of a dead man, I ask his people for a suit of his clothes—not a new suit, but an old one, the oldest suit that may be found. I can tell the man's character by six inches of the legs of his trousers." It is from the way the trousers bag at the knees that Mr. Borglum decides character. This seems to be interesting on Mr. Sherlock Holmes' preserve.

HER SPECIALTY.

Mrs. Sutton advertised for a woman to do general housework, said he was a over a colored girl called, somewhere, and told him to find some for the position.

"Are you a good cook?" asked Mrs. Sutton.

"Yes, indeed, I don't cook," was the reply.

"Are you a good laundress?"

"I wouldn't do washin' and ironin' for the hull on the hull world."

"Can you sweep?" asked Mrs. Sutton.

"No," was the positive answer. "I'm not strong enough."

"Well," said the lady of the house, quite exasperated, "may I ask what you do do?"

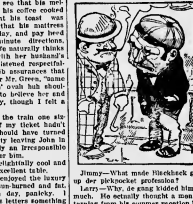
"I dusts," came the placid reply.—Everybody's Magazine.

His Memory.

"Do you remember," she asked when they met after the lapse of years, "the parting gift you made me as he having remained a bachelor, 'do you remember that evening, long ago, when you and I walked in the gloaming?'"

"I remember the swamp we walked into, but I don't remember the gloaming," he gave answer.

Then a fond hope died in her breast and she turned away to make herself agreeable to others.



Jimmy—What made Blackbeak give up dey pickpocket profession?

Larry—Why, de gang kidded him so much. He actually thought a man robbed a woman of her emotion reaction had money and tackled him.

Poor Patrice.

Patrice is fat
And she's a stout

A dainty little suit.

Quite Particular.

A clerk in a bank appeared before the court yesterday and asked that the growth of beard.

"Jones," said the president, "you will have to get shaved."

"Very well, sir," replied James, "I am growing a beard."

"You may do what you like at home," snapped the president, "but you must understand that I'll not have you growing a beard during office hours."—Judge.

The Telly.

"What are those notches on your pistol handle?" inquired the girl who was spending the summer in the far west.

"Fair game," answered the cowboy, "that's what you them notches on your parasol handle?"

"Fair game," answered the girl.

And then he changed his mind about proposing and strolled thoughtfully away.

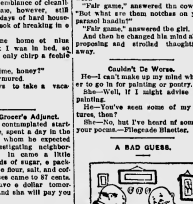
Couldn't Do Worse.

He—I can't make up my mind whether to go in for painting or poetry.

She—Well, if I might advise you, painting.

He—You've seen some of my pictures, then?

She—No, but I've heard of some of your poems.—Pittsgade Blatter.



Mrs. Jones—Guess what I've got in my purse.

Guest—Have you the same cook you had when I was here three months ago?

Host—Not by eighteen.

"Mike, it seems, has gone into bankruptcy. What was the trouble?"

CATCHES GAME FOR QUARTER

Bradley Keeher of Detroit Tigers is Called From Grandstand to Save Munificent Sum.

Had the manager of the Eastern team of the now defunct Atlantic league refused to give Jack Kocher, now second catcher of the Detroit team, the 25 cents that he paid to witness a game at Haines in 1910 the Tigers would probably be without one of the best young catchers in the game. That was the only condition that Kocher could meet at the time, when he was picked out of the stand after the only catcher that team had was crippled by a foul.

It is the merest bit of luck that gave Kocher his start in baseball. It happened this way. Kocher lived at White Haven, near Philadelphia, and a short distance from Easton. A big, husky fellow he frequented into Easton to visit his cousin, said boy being brother, in a day when the Easton team was playing a doubleheader against Sunbury, another Atlantic league team.

The cousin suggested that they spend the afternoon at the ball game and Kocher, who was something of a catcher in White Haven, agreed to go along. In the seventh inning of the first game Sunbury's catcher was put out with a busted finger and the cousin tipped the manager off to the fact that Kocher could catch.

Kocher was given the catch a game that he had paid to see, and he informed the manager, during the proposition that he would catch if he received the same pay. An agreement resulted, he put on Sunbury's uniform and finished the innings of star ball. The following day Lave Cross, the old Athletic and Washington third baseman, came to Easton with his Atlantic league team. Kocher threw out the base men with such speed and ease that Cross told Connie Mack that Kocher has had a job ever since.

PITCHER LOSES LITTLE TIME

Pitcher Bagon of the Brooklyn Dodgers is one of the fastest working pitchers in the baseball league. In a recent game with the Cincinnati Reds just one hour and seven minutes were needed to enable Bagon to defeat the westerners. Bagon omits all unnecessary motions and does not waste a work all the time he is in the box. Besides being a breathing spell, he allowing his catcher any rest.

Triple Play Unsalted.

First Baseman Hoffman and Scops of the Portland Baseball club of the Pacific Coast league made a triple play unassisted in a recent game between Portland and Oakland. Oakland runners were on first and second bases. The batsman hit a low liner toward Hoffman and the baseman thinking the ball could not be fielded, started toward the bag. He caught the ball with one hand before it touched the ground. Both runners first base believing the runner could get back and then raced to second in time to get the third man.

Good to Taxpay.

They had to strain a point to make a mark against Jeff Tesreau at Philadelphia on September 6, but not because the big Giant twirler did his part. The disputed hit was a short fly hit by Paskert in the sixth and Tesreau went after it and let it drop between them. It was first scored as a hit for Paskert, but on appeal was without batting an eye the he took the ball and handed it to the official Tesreau's hit column might be a blank.

Artiea in Mix-Up.

Artie Hofman and Artie Butler did the Alphonse and Gaston act on the field recently, and were rounded for being banished, both Manager Clarke for them to their rescue with the explanation that it was due to both having the same name. "Wagner shortstop," for Butler and Curley shouted "Artie" for Hofman, and the result was that both Arties ran after the ball and stopped only a collision.

Great Work by Fields.

Lou Fields of the Chicago Cubs has done great work in the box for the team this year. He is only a pitcher, but his splendid twirling has helped mightily to assist the Cubs in the pennant race.

Gaston Suspended.

Dave Gaston was suspended for the season in the South Atlantic league because he was thrown more than the limit of baseballs.

DOUBLE TRACKING WORK IS DELAYED

One-Tenth as Many Laborers Working on Double Tracking Reading Road as are Desired, May Live Work to Contractors.

Because of the great scarcity of laborers in this section work at double tracking the Reading road between Gettysburg and Mount Holly Springs, in prevention of which this year's limit is anniversary, is being seriously retarded. On Wednesday there were twenty six men employed, out of two hundred, the number which the company would like to have engaged on the work.

So serious has the difficulty become that the Reading is now considering the matter of letting the work to contractors instead of proceeding with their own men as was originally the plan. The work on the new freight house has also been temporarily stopped. It is learned to get all of this work completed at the very earliest possible date.

Even with the small force the operations have been going along right well and some of the grading is finished. Track has been laid to the new freight house and the men now at work are being so time to finish contracts.

The shortage of laborers is bothering not only the Reading road but all others in this section who have construction operations on hand. The state highway force has been inactive for weeks on this account and everywhere is heard the complaint that day laborers cannot be secured. Quarrying in the town have been delayed from this same cause and only on Tuesday night the town council found it necessary to offer more money for the services of dog laborers.

It is expected that, with the return of cold weather, many now employed in this work will be thrown out of work and the activities which can be carried on during the winter will then be supplied with hands.
